CAMERON'S HOUSE.

A SPLENDID SENATORIAL MANSION.

The Pennsylvania Statesman's New Residence on Scott Circle-A Grand Hall of Oak-Quaint and Magnificent Effects-A Full Deseription of the Edifice.

The general character of the residences which have been erected in Washington during the past few years has been in line with the thought of the founders of the city, who, in providing for broad, sweeping avenues and magnificent parks and circles, intended to make this capital the loveliest city in the world. The very curves, irregular angles, and odd corners made by the intersection of the avenues, streets, tectural display. Standing in one of these circular parks in the northwestern part of the city, one's eye is met on every side with long vistas of elegant houses, the breadth of the streets permitting fine perspective effects, which it is quite impossible to obtain in other cities. When all these circles are adoraed with works of art and sur-SPLEXBID MANSIONS.

the city in its finished beauty will far surpass even the grand city that rose by magic in the dreams of Washington and L'Enfant. One of the latest additions to the treasury of architectural art to be found in Washington is the residence of Senator Don Cameron, fronting upon Scott Circle, at the intertion of Sixteenth street and Rhode Island avenue. be occupied by the Senator and his family in the autumn. No more desirable site for a residence could have been found by the Pennsylvania Senator. The location commands some of the grandest views to be obtained in this city of grand views. Away in the distance, down Sixteenth street, can be seen the white columns of the Executive Mansion. Massachusetts and Rhode Island avenues, stretching off to the east and west, open up vistas unequaled for loveliness: while away to the south and west the sky-line is broken by the low hills of Virginia and the irregular heights of Georgetown. The location is admirable also on account of the fine views of the mansion which can be obtained from almost any point in that SCOTT CIRCLE is destined to be environed with magnificent residences. Already three of the handsomest dwellings that modern architecture has produced front upon it. These are the Cameron and Brodhead mansions and the residence of Paymaster-General Cutter. The residence of Senator Cameron, though the exterior is plain and bare of ornament, possesses a sort of massive grandeur which seems to comport well with senatorial dignity. Its cleancut walls are made of the finest pressed brick, the wood-work is of the most solid and durable character, the outlines are easy and attractive, without any straining for effects, and the whole immediately suggests a simple and substantial elegance, which seems particularly appropriate for the home of a man who represents a great and rich State in the American Senate. Mr. Fraser, the architect, in planning the exterior, seemed rather to have sought to avoid all ornament. The almost painfully plain facade is relieved only by a portecochere at the main entrance, the frame-work being of iron, resting upon piers of solid brick and takes out inflammation and soreness speemly, and invigorates and strengthens weak eyes. It does not injure in the slightest degree the delicate fibres of the nerves. Can be used freely by the young, the aged, and the feeble. Sold by druggists. This | lege. hall presents a study in itself. The dimensions are 35 by 25 feet. The lofty ceiling is of solid oak; upper floors is of heavy oak, richly carved and polished. The corner opposite to or furthest from the entrance hall is squared off and filled with a great fire-place, constructed after the fashion of a hundred years ago, though probably more elegantly and substantially finished than any of the chimney-corners of our revolutionary fathers. The fire-place is made of polished brick, designed specially for this work. The wide hearth is made of richly colored tiles. On either side of this fireplace is a recess intended for seats, and over it is a shelf made of one slab of stone. The fire-place is fitted with a crane, and adds a comfortable, homelike appearance to the house. In another corner has been placed an old-fashioned clock. taller than a man. STATELY STAIRCASE and its quaint surroundings are very fine and suggestive. Before the house is occupied it is proposed to fill the windows in the grand hall, including the two little windows over the fireplace, with stained glass, which will add a richness of color that will greatly heighten the effects. The general plan of the upper stories of the house is similar to that of the lower or main floor, there being five large chambers on each floor. The upper story in the French roof is intended for servants' quarters. In the ample basement is a large kitchen, a laundry, furnace-room, and apartments for the other departments of labor, necessary to sustain a large, establishment. The main floor is finished in oak and poplar, with floors of Georgia pine, bordered with black walnut. A noticeable feature of the house is the variety in THE MANTELS, all of which are made of richly-carved wood, and ornamented with tiles tastefully arranged around the grates. The massive mantel in the parlor is of black walnut, exquisitely carved. The tiling is of a most elaborate design, the colors having been carefully studied. Over this mantel is a mirror of heavy French glass, set in the wood. The mantel in the dining-room, which is a fine, large apartment, with a semi-octagonal end, is of butternut wood. The other mantels are of different kinds of wood, all varying in design. The halls of the house are heated with steam, but all of the rooms are provided with fire-places. Electric bells and speaking tubes run through the mansion, connecting the room of the mistress of the manse with the different departments of the house. The architect purposely avoided any extravagant decoration of the rooms, other than is given by the richly-furnished wainscoting and mantels, as is expected that it will be thrown open to the public. The arrangement of the house peculiarly adapts it for social enter ainments, and it is | might probably secure what improvements he desafe to venture that its walls will witness many gay scenes during years to come.

AN ALLEGED INSURANCE FRAUD,

An Attempt to Victimize the Washington Endowment Association. A conspiracy to defraud the Washingon Beneficial Endowment Association was recently brought to light by the officials, who nipped the project in the bud, and are about $29,000 better off. The story as told by a representative of the association is that about six weeks ago a party applied for a risk of $4,000 on the life of his sister, stating that she was married and but twenty-nine years of age. He asked a number of questions as to the methods by which the money could be obtained in case of death, and aroused the suspicions of the agent, who reported the matter to the trustees for investigation. The usual form was complied with, and the physician of the association sent to the house of the applicant to that instead of one applicant there were two would be beneficiaries, and that they were conlatter, when asked as to the discrepancy in his were not available and that he had guessed at the ages of his sisters. The investigation of the trustees developed the fact that about eighteen months ago the brother had been nonsuited in an Prices Marked for Cash Trade. action against a fire insurance company, in which it was strongly hinted that he had set fire to his property to get the money for which it was insured. And really we can see no good to come out of the withdrawal of Riddleberger, for any one substituted for him would receive just as bitter opposition. So far as his withdrawal or election would affect the campaign in Virginia, we think it is misapprehended. Riddleberger, as Sergeant-at-Arms of the United States Senate, would be no more influential than Riddleberger defeated for that place. ## South Carolina.

The State of South Carolina is very like pleted. The sculptor generally drew out $5,000 at a state of war. A system of exchange of prisoners is carried on between the Nation and that State When breakers of the election laws are arrested by United States process they cause the arrest of Republican citizens of prominence on the false charge of making a riot. Convenient State courts convict these, and then, with the penitentiary in view of the victims, the chivalrous Bourbons are ready to exchange prisoners, releasing the unoffending Republicans on condition that the law-breakers are set free. This recognizes a state of war. Indeed, there has been no other state in South Carolina since the Republican government was overthrown. It was a glut in the market.

After a brief reference to the character of Horace's poetry and its universal popularity, he read specinens of translations of different odes by Sir Philip Sydney, Ben Jonson, Milten, Cowley, Dryden, Addison, Byron, Earl Derby, and many others, including a parody by Thackeray. He then, to show the great diversity of styles and their relative merits, gave a large number of translations of the Thirteenth Ode, which the essayist said was his favorite one, closing with an imitation of it by himself, which compared very favorably with many of those cited from eminent authors. Judge Shellabarger followed with some apposite remarks on Earl Derby and his translation of Homer, and on the distinctive merits of Horace. What need for Senator Jones, of Florda, to pervert the Scriptures and the Saviour's achings to bolster up oppression in the past in the South? He asserts that the Saviour never spoke against oppression. So far from that being the case, about the very first sermon He preached was against oppression, and in consequence He was mobbed by those who disbelieved in the equality of man, just as men were mobbed in this country for teaching the same doctrine. About the first ermon He preached was from the text (Isaiah I, 1-2) which proclaimed that He had come to preach good tiding, to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captive, and opening the prison door to the bound—to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord. And because He then preached liberty and equality and that God looked with favor upon the humblest classes, the believers in that day in the right of the strong oppress the weak rose upon and thrust him out of the Synagogue, took him to the brow of the hill to cast him from thence; but he escaped by a miracle. And any man who ever attempted to preach from the same text (Luke, iv., 18-19) in Senator Jones State or any other Slave State would have fared equally bad, or worse. The whole tenor of the Saviour's teachings was to carry out the docrine promulgated before his day in Mosaic teach ings, and sanctioned by our revolutionary fathers inscription on the old liberty bill Miss Ransom's cozy studio was again claim liberty throughout all the land, unto all the nhabitants thereof." If Senator Jones never read omfortably filled last evening by the Classical the text above referred to be may have heard the Society and its friends. ### A Servant, Not a Master.

To the Editor of THE REPUBLICAN: I desire to call the attention of the District Commissioners, through THE REPUBLICAN, to a certain abuse of power existing in the special assessment division. About three years ago the District of Columbia illegally collected from me a sum of money for so-called "special improvements." I called on the "chief of special assessments," and respectfully asked him to inform me what had been allowed me by the "revision." was refused the information, and insultingly told to "call in a week." I then went to a prominent District official and requested the information. A messenger was sent for it, and in a few minutes the "chief" came in and roundly abused the gen-deman for endeavoring to get information after he had refused it. The law of Congress on the subject says:

PUBLIC-No. 38.1 An act relating to lax-sales and taxes in the District of Columbia, • • * And it is hereby declared that all public records which have any reference, or in any way relate, to real or personal property in said District, shall be open to the public for inspection free of harge. Approved February 6, 1679.

The tax-payers of this unfortunate community re certainly taxed high enough to warrant the Commissioners in paying salaries to its servants which would seeme the employment of gentlemen. The person called the "chief of assess-B C Book, 32 pages, amuring and useful resuling, out ments" seems to forget that he is the servant of the

But the decree has gone forth that dogs, "irrespective of race, color, or previous condition of servitude," must be slaughtered in self-defense to protect the owners from suits. It is a decision welcomed by those who love "bolognas," and no doubt halled with joy by every thief and burglar in the country. In future the owners of property in our miserably policed Dis-trict must keep lap and poodle dogs in their yards and on their premises, so that when burglars of an enterprising character invade their homes they that only when troubled or annoyed by any one was the dog violent, and in this case he was so annoyed; hence the bite. #### Postmaster-General Woodward, James.

To the Editor of THE REPUBLICAN: A casual visitor at the Post-Office Department yesterday heard Postmaster-General Woodward, ner James, discuss the subject of the steamboat mail service in the South and West, where steamboats are the only means of rapid transit. The substance of Postmaster-General Woodward's observations were to the effect that the steamboat mail service must be discontinued; hat the expense of such service to accommodate the people who depended upon steamboat transit for their mail facilities was greater than the receipts would justify; and he remarked "we" must cut this business short off. Postmaster-General Ground has been set apart on which to rect a handsome Episcopal Church at Fredericksurg.

Woodward, ner James, spreads himself over a good deal of territory just at this moment, but he spreads very thin. It is not unlikely that this little detective, if he isn't promptly curbed, will soon wake up an irrepressible storm among the people of the great South and West, who have the same right to receive their mails by rapid tran on steamboats or expedited star routes, as the Connecticut people have to receive theirs by fast-mail railroad trains.
